

Tasteful INTERRUPTION BRAND NEW QUAIN PLACES

with Count Pogir and Alissa Sutton

Southern Vanity Magazine has taken the traditional restaurant critique out of the hands of the over-stimulated, over-nourished palates and given the voice to our readers. The program, Tasteful Interruption, works as follows: SV's Pogir and Alissa make reservations at the featured restaurant. During the course of dinner, random guests are selected and delicately spied upon until the moment the dinner plates are whisked away from the table. The troops swoop in. Over dessert and coffee, delightful conversation gives way to an honest, spontaneous review of their dining experience. Once the brief questions are answered, the fun continues as the guests are challenged to a game of Rock, Paper, Scissors. If the guests win, dinner's on us ... If we win, we treat them to dessert.

Ashley and Braden describe to our readers:

Atmosphere: Fresh and forward; edgy for Dallas—we love that. We have eaten all over the country and appreciate a well-designed environment.

Food: Unbelievable, and served with a wonderful presentation—especially the sea bass.

Service: Professional and attentive

Experience: We really enjoyed our experience and will definitely be back for more!

Location: Great—centrally located and easy to find.

Favorite Element: The roses on the table smell great while you eat. But I must say, my brother's striking artwork hanging on the wall as you walk in would have to be my favorite element.

Comments: The style and the food bring innovation to the area. We like the small and intimate environment—it's something to see.

Rock, Paper, Scissors:

They won. Dinner on us!

Martha and Jock describe to our readers:

Atmosphere: Elegant, neighborhood restaurant—there's nothing else like it in this area.

Food: Fabulous and extremely creative; we enjoyed the amazing onion rings and highly recommend the duck.

Service: Excellent; we really enjoyed our evening here.

Experience: We have been coming to this building for more than 20 years and really enjoyed the new experience this place brings to Dallas.

Location: Easy to get to and extremely rare—located in, what looks like, an old house but was originally an iron factory. The authentic light fixtures still adorn the interior, giving spectacular character.

Favorite Element: Not only is the menu great and will bring us back for best onion rings in town, but the live music and singing will also bring us back, no doubt.

Comments: Not many places offer such creative food, an elegant atmosphere, live music and an owner that enjoys serenading his guests with some of his favorite songs. What more can you ask for?

Rock, Paper, Scissors:

We won. Dessert on us!

Kirk and Katherine describe to our readers:

Atmosphere: Quaint, New York neighborhood type of feel.

Food: She hasn't stopped talking about how great the food was, so she brought me here to try it tonight. I must say she is right!

Service: Attentive and courteous.

Experience: The music is relaxing and the food is wonderful. We really enjoyed the mushroom Wellington and the veal.

Location: The area is great and really provides that neighborhood feeling.

Favorite Element: The Food!!!!

Comments: The quality of the food is exceptional, and the fact that you can dine out on the patio or inside the restaurant allows you to really take advantage of what this restaurant has to offer.

Rock, Paper, Scissors:

We won. Dessert on us!
